Galway City - Galway as a small fishing village centred on the estuary of the River Corrib, a river traditionally called Abhainn Na Gaillimhe (The Galway River) after Galvia, a mythological princess is said to have drowned in its waters. There is vibrancy to the friendly university city, which many delight in, and few forget. Music, festivals, Eyre Square - A very attractive town square, where a plaque stands to the memory of John F. Kennedy, who was made a Freeman of the City shortly before his death in 1963.

St. Nicholas Collegiate Church - Galway City. Tel: 091 564648 www.stnicholas.ie - Founded in 1320, this church remains one of the son, who had confessed to murdering a visiting Spaniard.

The Claddagh Village - Galway City - A visit to Galway City just isn't complete without a stroll through the Claddagh seafront on the bank opposite the Spanish Arch. The thatched cottages which were once home to the city's fisherman and Genoa on the 500th anniversary of the discovery of America.

Nora Barnacle House - Located in Bowling Green adjacent to St. Nicholas' Church is the home of Nora Barnacle, the wife of the world famous Irish literary figure, James Joyce. Joyce stayed in the house many times while visiting his in-laws.

These various parts, restaurants, shops and bars are attractions of all kinds. Galway is a city with much to offer an atmosphere of fun and festivity.
